

Ethernet42U network rack price

AI Overview

A 42U network rack typically costs between $300 and $1,500, depending on material, depth, and features.

Price Range and Factors

The cost of a 42U rack varies widely based on material, depth, weight capacity, and additional features:

- Basic steel or aluminum racks with standard 19" width and 24"-39" depth generally start around $300–$500 for open-frame or simple enclosed cabinets (SysRacks, Newegg).
- Mid-range racks with locking front and rear doors, cable management, and adjustable rails typically cost $600–$1,000 (idealo.de, Newegg).
- High-end racks made of heavy-duty steel or aluminum, with high weight capacity (up to 1,500 kg), advanced cooling options, and full enclosure features can reach $1,200–$1,500 or more (idealo.de, SysRacks).

Additional Considerations

- Depth: Deeper racks (35"-39") are more expensive than standard 24" depth racks.
- Weight Capacity: Racks supporting heavier equipment cost more due to reinforced frames.
- Doors and Panels: Lockable, perforated, or mesh doors add to the price.
- Accessories: Cable management, casters, leveling feet, and fan modules can increase cost.
- Vendors: Prices vary across online marketplaces like Amazon, Newegg, eBay, and specialized suppliers like SysRacks.

Summary

For a medium to large data center setup, expect to pay $500–$1,200 for a fully enclosed 42U rack with standard features. Open-frame or basic racks suitable for smaller setups can be purchased for $300–$500. Always consider depth, material, and additional features when comparing prices.
